

Religious Toleration in the Age of Enlightenment (1650-1800)

Monday June 22nd- Tuesday 23rd, 2015

Institute for Culture and Society – Religion & Civil Society Project

Universidad de Navarra – Pamplona

Central Building - Room 30

The role of the Enlightenment in the history of religious toleration has been the subject of numerous accounts that carry a great deal of weight in contemporary political, intellectual and religious discussions. Our conference convenes a prestigious group of international scholars to reconsider these narratives. By critically examining the historical presuppositions that pervade current debates on freedom of thought, conscience and religion, we aim to contribute to a more rigorous dialogue on this vital subject.
